Library Presence in Your Blackboard Class

Today, it seems, that most all classes have a Blackboard component, traditional and distance learning alike. In an effort to meet our students and faculty where they are, CCAC Library has worked with the Distance Learning staff to get subject specific resource guides into your Blackboard courses.

Each Library Resource Guide will give your students access to the most relevant library databases, topical websites that provide quality information, citation guides, easy access to the library books and ebooks.

When you sign up for a new Blackboard course, you will automatically see a “Library Resources” item on your menu. You will then choose what subject is most relevant to your class. Quick, and painless.

If your class has long had a Blackboard component, you will be asked via email to upload the “Library Resources” into your class, with the instructions and files right there at your fingertips. We are excited about this partnership with Distance Learning, and hope that it gives your students access to the information they most need, in the place that they most need it.
